Highlights

Rinjani's ominous silhouette is a constant reminder of the powerful forces rumbling just beneath the surface of the earth. That power is what draws hundreds of intrepid hikers to Rinjani every day. Mount Rinjani looms large over the entire island of Lombok in Indonesia at 3762m above sea level.

Come and join us to Discover an amazing three-day experience that includes hiking to the stunning lake and Rinjani Summit, as well as a hot spring excursion at Segara Anak Lake. At 1,156 meters above sea level, the picturesque village of Sembalun is the starting point of this amazing adventure. After that, you'll be led through a succession of breathtaking vistas.

What To Expect?

Ascending to an elevation of 3726m, the Mt. Rinjani trek presents a challenge rated 'moderate-difficult' due to its altitude. The presence of volcanic soil and ash elevates its difficulty level further. Despite its brevity, this trail poses a formidable challenge, even for seasoned trekkers. Starting at 1100m, you ascend to nearly 1524m in just one day, testing your endurance and stamina significantly.

Over two days, hikers ascend more than 2626m feet to reach Mt. Rinjani's summit. Prepare for an adventurous journey across scree, gravel, and loose lava-black soil. The rugged terrain and considerable trekking distance on the final day may seem daunting. However, it promises an exhilarating experience amidst the captivating landscapes of Mt. Rinjani.
